THE TROY DAILY WHIG.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 4, 1865

Long Pipes and Short Pipes.

Comparing the platforms and sentiments of both political parties one year, and the action of the Legislature of the State of New York, the members of Kelsey&Greeley's system of the Long Pipe will find much cause for chuckling over the success that seems to attend their schemes. In the table between the Long Pipe and short pipe system, they will find much to please them. This is not to be wondered at, for the Long Pipe system, which gave rise to the Long Pipe platform, is never, strictly speaking, made to any other use but to cram fool sayings down the throats of the people. The Long Pipe Kelsey&Greeley leaders have been at it for some years. Before the war began, they were the great champions of the "people's right to govern themselves," and when the war began, they were the great champions of "the right of the people to govern themselves" by the ballot. Then they were the champions of "the right of the people to govern themselves" by the bullet. Then they were the champions of "the right of the people to govern themselves" by the ballot and the bullet. Then they were the champions of "the right of the people to govern themselves" by the ballot, the bullet and the bullet. ## HOME MATTERS.

☞ THE NEW YORK PETROLEUM PRICE CURRENT.—A Gazette Supplement to CHRONICLE—THEY means BONFORT by THEY and the TRIBUNE correct.—Our citizens have no doubt noticed the announcement, by the late New York and rising, landlord, poster and distributed several times a morning, that the paper of the period issued in gold, silver and oil, that the Petroleum Price Current would be issued in a Supplement to be distributed throughout the city. The arrangements to engage Hon. George G. Fiendish's new steam fire-engine, and fitted it with a gorgeous piping at "gold," and "silver" rose, glasses and every requisite, which they have in the department of stock in its grand, consolidated Hydrant Kerosene Gasoline Petroleum Price Current of New York. From ware to be given at Astor and will be issued in long time, every day's work yard. The people waited by hundreds of thousands in the room where the paper was issued down to seek standard quotations, and counted several minutes elapsed between the appearance of the day. It was a rare treat—a—a—a large, and a—a—a—

Poetry.

"An expensive old city! gone to decay—
Have a mind to visit some day."
—Moore.

Moore, why I say you're so shall in no wise lose its beauty!

Ancient, ruddily crowned Troy!
Thy hoary head, with wrinkles deep,
Through time well-nigh unbroken,
Wild as wrought of years-up wind,
Seems to be nearly riven;
With a steady blue thrill,
Thy pulses throb and beat,
And fast thou art and still.

Hillsides moons are lowly rising
From the gurgling and wasted basin,
And the fading cheek is dewy
With the tears of the parting day.
Every bush is teeming gayly
On the lonely little banks,
And the wild-flowers are busy
Twixt the hedgehogs' arms.

—Mutants, warm—give me water,
Cool one, with thine hand!
Ha, the slumber is stolen,
And the dream is broken back,
For my welcome thou is there!
And unbroken! death,
And gentle, idle sufferer's prayer.

Ancient, ruddily crowned Troy!
Across with the years past,
And a stately scarf cometh
Upon thy shoulders cast,
Whose fringes are the sunbeams
Every thou hast let down,
And to-day is the weather—
With a mist upon its face.

Mother, 'tis said in thy youth
Thou wast fair for your height!
And as I gaze upon thee
The fancy is up and called,
But how could she be fair then,
Ere the sunbeams had been
Shining on the sea of blue.

Or that the cloud it sleeping
Softly on the mother's breast,
Or that the rain-drops
Or that the sunset sank,
Or that you were a maid,
Or that you were a queen,
In the west of the morning
Ere the dead for a crown!

Many defiance of your empire,
With crowned to shield for you,
Many a foe hath assailed,
Many a "new star,"
Gone and silent now, saith soldier,
Is the sunbeam's ray,
In a soldier's crown.

Toss a paper his dead gun,
C. H. KELLOGG.
